Practice 1: Write an essay on 'Cleanliness is next to the Godliness.'

The proverb, “Cleanliness is next to Godliness” is a wise saying. The words “Cleanliness” and “Godliness” means being devoutly clean and devoutly religious, respectively. When a person refers to the term “Cleanliness”, he refers to the state of being pure and clean. Being clean does not necessarily mean keeping our surroundings clean, in a more holistic approach, one starts “Cleanliness” with themselves. The first step towards Cleanliness is to purify our minds and bodies to avoid the entry of evil and disturbing thoughts in our mind, and then gradually, we can move forward to cleaning our surroundings.

A successful life’s secret is organization. The more organized you are, the more are the chances of being successful in life. If a person is in the state of complete mental well-being and is the owner of a fit body, success will automatically crawl into his life. Having a healthy mind allows us to learn useful things much faster and apply them in our day to day lives. It is a key to increase the thinking capability of an individual and the productivity in the work field.

“Cleanliness” also means being hygienic. This inevitably reduces the chances of catching a disease and thus saves a lot of time spent lying in bed and taking medications. There are some guidelines that one may follow in order to apply and utilize the purpose of the proverb, for example, we must keep in mind that a dustbin is a depot for germs and diseases and must be emptied regularly. Using a dustbin with a lid is highly recommendable. Keeping the home and office dust-free is essential. This reduces the possibilities of catching allergies. Dirty toilets must be cleaned immediately. Not only is it a part of maintaining high-quality Cleanliness but also stops spreading severe illness and infections.

“Cleanliness is next to Godliness” helps to contribute to one’s religious and spiritual life too. The highest form of worshipping is purifying oneself to feel more energetic and refreshed. Living in a clean environment also helps to optimize psychological health, which further keeps one away from thinking and doing something evil.
